INTRODUCTION

The letters covered in this volume relate to the period from 1803 to 1830 A.D. of the Balasore Collectorate. The letters contain in this volume are only of Revenue matters and they pertain to subject like settlement and problems connected with the Revenue and General Administration of the district. But most of the letters deal with routine matters rather than policy or programme.

The first correspondence of this volume is a letter, dated 3rd October, 1803 from Colonel Harcourt to Captain Morgan conveying his satisfaction on the success of British troops at Balasore. It may be mentioned in this connection that Captain Morgan was sent from Fortwilliam with a detachment of 500 native troops, 21 Artillery men and four 6-Pounders to occupy Balasore. They arrived in three ships and landed at Jampada near Gabgaon, a village adjoining old Balasore on the east. They then advanced along the Bank of the river and owing probably to the difficult nature of the ground were not opposed by the Maratha till they got close to Balighat just below Barabati. Here a band of horseman attacked them and in the skirmish which ensured, one European soldier was killed. The English then rushed forward and attacked the Maratha Fort. They took possession of the Fort on the 21st September, 1803. The Maratha appear to have made little or no resistance and quickly disappeared. Immediately after the fall of Maratha Fort a drum was beaten in all the bazars announcing that the English had taken possession of the Province and would protect all who would behave themselves peacefully. Morgan then proceeded towards Soro with a small detachment of force and successfully dislodged a party of the enemy and occupied Soro without much difficulty. Another detachment of troops under Colonel Fergusson then moved from Jaleswar. The party arrived at Balasore without any opposition and marched on to join the main body at Cuttack. After a few days Cuttack was occupied on the 10th October, 1803 and by this whole of Orissa passed under the British rule. Though a detailed account of the British occupation of the Province is not available from the correspondences of this volume, the early correspondences throw some light on the subject of British occupation of Orissa and pertain to subjects like movement of troops, intelligence service and war instructions exchanged between Colonel Harcourt and Captain Morgan.

By the treaty of Deogaon concluded between Raghuji Bhonsla and East India Company on the 17th December, 1803, the Province of Cuttack including the Port and district of Balasore was ceded to the Company in perpetual sovereignty.

Raghuji agreed to confirm certain treaties which the East India Company has concluded with the feudatory States in course of the war. The feudatory States or Garjats which came under the control of the East India Company were sixteen in number and they were generally known as the Tributary Mahals of Orissa. In the year 1837, two more 'Mahals' were added to their number. Thus, the three districts of Balasore, Cuttack and Puri on the sea coast and eighteen Tributary Mahals in the hill region to the West constituted the Orissa of the East India Company. The British laws and regulations were applicable only to the three districts and in the Tributary Mahals such laws and regulations were not enforced. The three districts which were ordinarily known as the 'Province of Cuttack or the Zila of Cuttack' at the time of British conquest were first included in the Presidency of Bengal. The Government of Bengal framed policies, supervised the administrative affairs and exercised control over the officers in Orissa. It may be mentioned here that there was no separate secretariat establishment of the Government of Bengal till 1843. In that year Lord Ellenborough completely separated the administration of Bengal from the General Administration of India. In 1853, the Governor-General of India who was also the Governor of Bengal and was burdened with the local duties of vast extent and importance was finally relieved of that charge and a Lieutenant Governor was appointed for the administration of Bengal alone.

In the year 1804, the Province was divided into two divisions, the Northern and the Southern with the Mahanadi as the boundary between them. In the Northern Division Mr. Robert Ker and in the Southern Division Mr. Charls Groeme were appointed as the Judge, Magistrate and Collector.[1]

The Office of the Special Commissioner which was created after the conquest of the Province was abolished by Regulation XIII of 1805 and the Special Commissioner removed to Calcutta in June, 1805. The Superintendent of the Revenue affairs of the Province was transferred to the Board of Revenue at Fortwilliam. By the same Regulation of XIII of 1805, the Northern and Southern Divisions were amalgamated and placed under one Collector.

By Regulation XIV of 1805, the Bengal Regulation regarding Civil Suits were extended to Orissa.[1]

In 1818, the office of Commissioner was established under Regulation I of 1818 with powers of a Revenue Board, Board of Trade, Provincial Court of Appeal, Court of Circuit and Committee of Embankment.

By Regulation I of 1829, Cuttack was made the 19th to Commissionership of Revenue and Circuit and comprised Cuttack, Khurda, Balasore, Midnapur and Nuagaon including Hidgellee[2]. The powers of the Commissioner were those of the Board of Revenue and Court of Wards (subject to the control of the Sadar Board of Revenue) and Court of Circuits.

With this administrative charges of the Province, the jurisdiction of Balasore district had undergone many changes since 1803 A. D. Balasore was made a central of quasi-military administration for sometime after the conquest and Captain Morgan was placed in charge of the district. First he was merely a Military Officer Commanding at Balasore, but subsequently became Collector, Magistrate and Salt and Customs Agent. Under him there was a native Amil or Collector of Revenue at Balasore and three more at Soro, Bhadrak and Dolgram. He exercised authority between the sea and the hill States, but to the North, all the parganas beyond Nangaleswar and Satmalang formed part of the old Bengal district of Midnapur and to the South, the limits of his authority were ill-defined. In 1804, he made over charge to Mr. Ker, who was designated as the Collector and Magistrate, Northern Division of Cuttack and appears to have exercised jurisdiction as far as the Brahmani river in the South. Mr. Ker proceeded to make the first settlement of the country but this settlement did not go beyond Basta to the North as Jaleswar was under Midnapur, and the country East of that place came under a separate arrangement. This tract of country between it and the sea was called the "Maratha Mahals" and consisted of the pargana of Pattaspore, Kamardachour and Bhograi, together with the smaller mahals of Shahbunder, Napochaur and Kismat Kat Sahi. This charge was abolished 12 months after its formation in 1805. After completing this settlement, Mr. Ker made over charge to Mr. Webb, who was appointed Collector of all Orissa or as it was called the district of Cuttack. For 24 years after this whole Province formed but one district having its headquarters at Puri until 1816, when Cuttack was made the Capital. From 1805 to 1821, Balasore was administered from Cuttack and had no separate Revenue Officer; but in 1821 a Joint Magistrate was stationed at Balasore as the Deputy of the Magistrate of Cuttack, his duties being chiefly the trial of criminal cases and the Superintendence of Police. In 1827 Balasore was constituted an independent Collectorate under Mr. H. Ricketts, and in 1828, Jajpur and Bhadrak were attached to it, Jajpur being subsequently transferred to Cuttack. On the North a perflexing series of transfers and retransfers of parganas or fiscal divisions went on for a long time between Balasore and Midnapur, some being transferred backwards and forwards as many as three times. This constant shifting of jurisdiction of this district made very difficult to manage and large discretion had to be allowed to the officers. For example, the Raja of Kanika frequently gave trouble and action against him was taken sometimes from Cuttack district and sometimes from Balasore.

We have stated earlier that Balasore was administered from Cuttack up to 1821 and a separate Collectorate was constituted in the year 1827. Therefore, all important records relating to growth and organisation of this district including policy and programme of Government for the administration of this district are available in the correspondences of Cuttack Collectorate. The early correspondences contained in this volume throw some light on British occupation of Orissa and pertain to subjects like movement of troops, intelligence service and war instruction exchanged between Colonel Harcourt and Captain Morgan as we have stated earlier.

There is frequent mention of the settlement of different parganas including that of Pattaspore and engagements made with different farmers. When the British conquered the Province in 1803 and approached the question of its settlement, no revenue documents were available from the officials, except certain Jamabandi papers or records of assessment made over by the Chief Kanungo or the Maratha Government. No knowledge was, therefore, gained of the various rights of the Taallukdars or of the different tenures and titles of other collecting Officers. Stirling's Minute of 1821 was the first attempt made to deal exhaustively with the subject and it was not until the settlement of 1837—41 that rights and titles were finally settled and adjusted. The Maratha Amalas, Sadar Kanungoes, Taallukdars and Mukaddams were all interested to preserve such information for their own use which should have been in the hands of Government. Some were busy in establishing a proprietory title which had never existed, others in furthering a claim to hold rent-free lands liable to assessment. The hands of most were against their neighbours and every man's hand was against the Government.

The first settlement of the Province, which was for one year only, was concluded in 1805 and was followed by a number of temporary settlements. A triennial settlement was first concluded and then in 1808-09 another settlement was made for one year, which was afterwards continued for a further period of three years. Other settlements followed in quick succession in 1812-13 for one year, in 1813-14 for two years, in 1815-16 for one year, in 1816-17 for three years, in 1819-20 for three years and in 1822-23 for five years. The history of these early settlements can be traced to some extent from the early records of the Balasore Collectorate. For this reason it is hoped that the present volume will prove of deep interest to the students doing work on the History of Orissa during the rule of East India Company.

The letters contained in this volumes also give some insight into the system of putting up defaulting estates for sale in Calcutta. When the Province was first occupied, the Bengal Regulations were extended to it and the assessment, which under the Maratha had included a considerable margin for remissions and deductions, became a fixed and invariable debt which the Zamindar had to discharge out of fear of losing his estate, in spite of the fact that Orissa was liable to suffer from the natural calamities like drought and flood. The consequences of this rigid administration of a permanently settled province were disastrous. Arrears accumulated rapidly and in 1806 began the system of putting up defaulting estates for sale in Calcutta, a policy which allowed Bengali speculators to buy valuable properties at low prices. Some of the oldest family of Orissa were ruined, one after another their estates were sold up and passed into the hands of Bengali adventures.

We have given a list of Officers those who were connected with the administration of the Province from 1803 to 1830 at the end of the introduction in order to help the scholars in their scholarly investigation. To conclude we may say that from various angle the records of this volume have a value and importance for the historian.
